Finance Minister Michael Noonan said the study will include contributions from the consumer group Which? and the Irish Retail Trading and Consumer Federation. Speaking at the launch of the “Delivering on the Potential” report, Mr Noonan said Ireland has some of the best retailing and consumer laws in the world but found a move to the single market would require the country to “push the boundaries of these laws”. “The good news is that there is no risk of us being dragged down by existing laws,” he said. “The tricky bit is what new laws would we need to adopt in the event we are not a member of the single market.”

Mr Noonan said a Brexit deal would create an “
